StoryLine: ERIC RONSON became an EMT to do something good with his life for once. His boss, DEAN DOHERTY, has more self-motivated reasons but does his job well despite his manic personality. When the two of them rush a dying man to the hospital, they discover he's covered in cash - one million dollars, to be exact. Tempted by the idea of fixing their less than ideal lives, they decide to keep the money, unaware of the targets they've now placed on their own backs...

Role: Brie
ANY ETHNICITY, in her 30s, sharp and independent, handy with a wrench and a very qualified EMT, Brie has lived a life of hardships that she'd rather not discuss with anyone. Almost intimidatingly pretty, she has the ability to earn anyone's trust in order to get what she wants. Now that Brie is in on splitting the million dollars she'll fight hard to stay alive but above all else, she's in it for herself...LEAD (6) STAR NAME PREFERRED. PLEASE SUBMIT ALL ETHNICITIES. OTHER ROLES

OTHER ROLES: Eric Ronson Lead Male 30-39
A tired EMT in his 30s, Eric Ronson has been pushing himself hard since becoming an emergency service professional; he's less than proud of his past but a good husband and father, aside from being at work more than at home. Though he's moral, thoughtful and possibly too trusting, even Eric can't resist keeping his share of a million dollars once the EMTs come across a dead drug mule. With visions of bringing his family the life they always deserved, Eric discovers that he's capable of crossing more lines than he's like to admit in order to stay alive...LEAD (1) STAR NAMES ONLY
Dean Doherty Lead Male 40-49
ANY ETHNICITY, in his 40s, a senior paramedic with a cocaine habit and receding hairline but plenty of confidence, he's the manic owner of

Swiftcare with poor decision making skills. Seeing himself as a mentor to Eric, he's prone to ranting on about his own beliefs and accomplishments, even if the list is short. When Dean convinces Eric to keep a million dollars they find on a dead victim, he's ready to play it cool and lay low until they're home free. But every decision Dean makes seems to make their situation about a hundred times worse...LEAD (1) STAR NAMES ONLY - PLEASE SUBMIT ALL ETHNICITIES
